I have just finished reading "War Path and Bivouac, or the Conquest of the Sioux," by John F. Chicagor As stated in the preface, the aim of the book "is to place before the public the adveatures, privations, heroism and horrors of our last great Indian wars, exactly as they presented themselves to the writer in battle, on the march or in bivouac."

Our literature has been both rich and pbor in imaginary Indian stories and battles, but we have been treated to very little real history. The author of "War Path and Bivouac" has written out of his own great experience, as the war correspondent of the Chicago Times. Mr. Finerty joined Gen. Crook's arrily on May 6th, 1876, and remained on the war path until the surrender of Sitting Bull in 1879. From preface to finis there is not a dull page in the volume. Indeed it is intensely interesting and will be found a most fascinating book for the adult reader, and a most useful as well as fascinating one for our young people. I had almost written for our boys, but our girls need the historical information contained in "War Path and Bivouac" guite as much as the others. This volume is finely illustrated, and will be found, I presume, at all our book stores.

The "Cosmopolitan" for June is a fine number. This magazine, like wine, is enriched by age. The picture of Murat Halstead is the frontispiece, and wonderfully life like. His rugged face expresses the pluck and fight which has characterized his whole public career. It is all there and much more. Among so many good things it seems a little unfair to call particular attention to one, but really all those who wish to add to their information on scientific subjects should read "Fragments of the Stars," by John Heard, Jr. Elizabeth Bisland's "Third Stage of a Flying Journey Around the World" is most interest.

Another dainty gown is made of gray chambray, with plaid sleeves and panel. The plaid is of sateen in green, pink and brown. It is one of the prettiest summer dresses; I have seen. The style is so simple and yet so taking that it is adaptable to any of the summer goods. The plaid can be replaced with all over embroidery or the dress itself can be of zephyr or Scotch gingham, with plain panels and sleeves. White mull or other thin material is very pretty made up after this model, but in that case a sash of fibbon in the back would be an addition. Both of these dresses are models after their kind, and would form the basis of dozens of slight changes which would adapt them to different tastes.

Among the newest things I have seen this year was a young mother walking in the street with her child. This has been quite out of the style for several-years. The young mother could go out with a big dog or a little one hung on a string, or she could carry a cat if it so pleased her, and I believe it would be an affing.
